LONG YEARS AGO

Let us take a look at the other main street and start from the Hotel and go southwards. In 1927 there was a vacant lot where the present Legion Hall stands. Next to that was and is the Farmers Exchange. In those days picture shows were shown on Saturday nights upstairs in the Farmers Exchange. Old Timers cannot you see those days? On Saturday nights in the Spring, Summer and Fall the farmers would gather up their families and hie them in the Model T or '26 Chev or team and buggy or whatever they had to hie them in, to town. They would order their groceries and out to the street to talk with the neighbors until near 8:30 p.m. when it was time to get upstairs to the show. Fred Bessant used to crank the projector by hand, and would have to install a new reel after each act, but we used to sit it out and think it just fine—that is, all of us but Fred, for I have seen him many times leave the projection booth just covered with perspiration. Another memory of those shows was that of Mrs. Barr who used to play the piano, and her stock tune was "Oh! Look at Charlie. Ma he's at it again!" I well remember one night when nothing went right with the film. It came off the track about 15 times, broke umteen times and caught fire I think once. Each time we would all cheer—that is, except Fred.

Well, next to the Farmers Exchange was a cafe known as the Carbon Cafe, this one being run by Yip Sing, and next to it was a hardware store, Wilkinson's Hardware managed by Jim MacLeod, which later became the Builders Hardware managed firstly by Aaron Klassen and later by Bill Ross, and Continued in next issue.
